Plays and Players of the Film World

The next few weeks will see a weeding out of the financially weaker motion picture producing companies. One of the smaller enes is expected to go to the wall within the next few days, and another, capitalized at several millions, is in such a shaky condition that anything seems within the range of possibility.

Several others are on the ragged edge because of misnanagement, dishonesty, grafting and incompetence. Quotations of the stocks of most of the film companies show that to-day they are valued at less than 60 per cent of their par value. Some are worth far less.

The trouble with the film market is that it is infested with financial undesirables, who are a wrecking businesses which should make handsome profits. The only remedy is a financial than clear the atmosphere. The men responsible for present conditions must be eliminated and honesty replace speculation of the wildcat type.

To obtain several big and exciting scenes for "The Blindness of Love," a Motro production, the entire campus of the University of Florida and hundreds of the students were used. The Metro company, headed by Director Charles Horan, was making the exterior scenes in and around Jacksonville. Fla., and had intended using a small seminary for the college scenes.

On a chance Horan communicated with the university officials and asked it it would be possible to make some pictures there. He was surprised when word came back that they would be delighted to entertain the Metro company, and as for pictures, they could go as far as they liked.

Horan had his entire company at the university gates, near Gainesville, the next afterneon. They spent the rest of the day rehearsing, and the students were given two holidays in order to participate in the scenes. Two football teams were put in action and a hotly contested game was staged the next day, while hundreds of students in the grandstands rooted and the camera clicked. ndstands rooted and the camera

Is Our Prosperity "A Blood-Soaked Boom?"

That is what one Congressman calls it, for, he continues:

You ride out in an American automobile to the trenches dug with American tools, lined with American lumber, protected by American barbed wire, manned with American guns, filled with American ammunition, defended by men equipped, clothed, and fed with American prodnets. American aeroplanes are scouting overhead, the cavalry dashes to the front on American horses, the light artillery is brought forth on American mules.

While this is a highly colored statement of actual conditions, there is no doubt that we are in the midst of abnormal trade conditions. The biggest financial chiefs in the country recognize this, and while some of them are optimistic in predicting the future, they also earnestly advise the exercise of caution in expanding our industries.
